Music IS a War Essential

Comment from Chicago Tribune

GENERAL PERSHING says, "Send us more singing regiments." For General Pershing knows, and every leader who has had command of men in war-time knows, the vital need of music.

To quicken dragging steps on weary marches; to lift the thought above monotony and homesickness in training camp; to put the fire of patriotic fervor into a charge, music is the one and never failing resource of the soldier.

And we who stay at home need music, too. For music will calm and steady us; it will inspire and strengthen us through hours of anxious waiting. We must hear and learn the patriotic songs and marches to which those brave young feet are so staunchly keeping time!

We must sing to them in our letters. Write often, again and again and let each one be filled with pride, joy and happiness.

Sing Until the Heart's Content

"A Singing Nation Will Win the War." Courtney Baylor, director of the Liberty Sing Committee of the War Camp Service, says:

"A singing nation will win the war. The value of music as one of the necessary means to victory in war has been known since the dawn of history and our government has taken cognizance of the fact and mapped out a nationwide campaign which will make the United States a singing nation."

"The 'Silent Yanks,' as we were known to Europe during the first few months after our declaration of war, have become 'Singing Yanks' and the news will be received with consternation in the kaiser's camp."

"The singing nation cannot lose. It is already on the road to victory. The wonderful spirit that good music inspires is the spirit which wins battles, and is just as necessary as men or cannon. Our boys are singing as they go 'over the top,' and we at home must sing to cheer them on."
